Regarding: Proceeding No. 03-187 Birds and communications towers

Dear Sir:

I have learned that very many, perhaps millions, of birds are being killed through collision with communications towers, being attracted, as I understand it, through the tower lights. We should find ways to adjust the lights to make the towers less of a danger to birds.

In this regard, you have my full support for the changes in lighting requirements that you are proposing to implement. I hope the changes will be made soon, and to all towers were possible

I always await with pleasure, and appreciate, the return of many birds in the spring. They are a joy to have around, and we should strive to remove deadly obstacles from their journey, if we can. I thank you, therefore, for seeking to make the communications towers more safe through new lighting regulations.

Sincerely,

Buddy Teague
